ABSTRACT

A system and method for generating reactive animation involved in providing a generic link between tools for the specification and execution of reactive systems and tools for graphic animation. The present invention can optionally be used in a wide range · of applications, including computer games, navigation and traffic systems, physiology models, and interactive scientific animation. Reactive animation helps make the programming of such applications more reliable, expeditious and natural.